FROSH HAIR CLIPPING MAY LEAD TO TYING-UP CONTEST

Sophomores Convert Cavalier Freshmen Into Simple "Roundheads" — A Cromwellish Effect Given to Verdant Polls.

"Are you ready? Start your action, camera!"

With the decorative movie camera focused, and the director ready to do his arm-waving, the Phoenix high school started off with a whoop yesterday, victims being said frosh.

Material the greatest it's been in many a year, the freshmen this season early hooked up with Ole Man Grief. Soon after restraint was released, things started to happen with lightning like rapidity. That part of the school which is regarded as luckless vermin during this part of the year, commenced to experience the playfulness of the sophomores. Large, shiny snicker-sneers, commonly called clippers, appeared in the hands of delegations of Sophs and soon many frosh were traveling around with despoiled pompadours. The process was unusually friendly. The victim was firmly held, while the operator cut a swath, just the width of the clipper blades, straight back from the forehead. The effect was mighty becoming—to a Semite chieftain, according to the illustrations in the well known works of the famous Mr.

Fennimore Cooper. But as a decorative scheme for a high school boy, it was painfully lacking in artistry. Result was many barbers got commissions yesterday. "Aw, just even it up a little, can't yuh? Darn't take it ALL off, but just what yuh got to make it look decent."

Converted into Roundheads, many a classily haberdashed youngster, who aimed to sport Varsity Fifty Fives and over collegian style clothes, will have to abandon Cavalier ambitions for a while. Still, the clipped poll proposition is not such a much of a worry, at that. With the utter gull that is said to be the only predominant quality of a freshman, many of the squirming creatures went so far as to register extreme pride in the fact that had been through the mill, were branded, had passed their test of good nature under torturing circumstances, and were now regular COYOTES, By Gosh!

The insidious effect of the class rivalry is expected to lead to a class rush. Word has been brought here of tying-up contests between the two lower classes at Stanford, where many former Coyotes have gone, and the popularity of this sort of a contest is expected to grow. Last year the classes got a lot of over heated blood, and Prof. Jones superintended a battle royal, in which some nice scrimmages were put on.

Three Rabs for a class rush, and let it come soon.

Glendale High Has Fast Heavy Team; New Coach

Sugar Kings Will Average Nearly 175 Pounds—Morgan Claims Fastest Backfield — Forty Candidates Worked Out Two Weeks

(Special to the Sport Page)

GLENDAL, Sept. 13.—Coach J. G. Morgan and forty of the huskiest candidates that ever lined up for a valley football team started Glendale high school's practical fall grid-campaign this afternoon with a strenuous practice, the first regular work out since the boys began practice over two weeks ago. The coach has just returned from the coast and found everything ready for him.

Glendale will put forth a championship team, according to Morgan. He says: "I will have the fastest of any high school in the state. In addition, the Sugar Kings this year are heavy—a goodly crop. My line will average from 165 to 175 pounds per man, that's quite some weight for a high school team. As it looks now, we may go through the entire season without losing a game. At least, that is our object."

Glendale has been in valley football for two years, and while the team has never made much of a showing, as yet, the material has been found to be of the best. Under an expert coach this fall, the Sugar Kings are likely to show some powerful stuff, and a few upsets in the old dope bucket may be expected.

INDOOR BASEBALL AT Y. BY TWO CHURCH TEAMS

This evening at six o'clock the world's championship indoor baseball battle between the Presbyterian John Knox team and M. E. John Wesley team will be contested to the "bitter end" in a five inning game. The Presbyterian captain is Ty Cobb Shrigley and the Methodist captain is "Jesse Willard" Judson. Manager Boardman has secured Dr. Wilkinson and C. D. Jones as the star battery and H. Shedd and Blair as reserve list players.

Some dispute was raised as to "Jesse Willard" Judson's eligibility as a church member. The Presbyterians claim he has not attended church since last Christmas. The dispute was settled as Harry Shedd said his dues were paid in full.

Some of the Methodist team are Yonkers, Herrett, Logan Munson, Dr. Munson, E. E. Fitzgerald and Mr. Goddard. The game will begin at six o'clock and the public are invited to see this aggregation of the greatest skilled and heady players and world's stars Phoenix has ever had the privilege of seeing.

Later in the season they will make a trip to the coast, taking along Governor Hunt as star pitcher. H. Winslow will umpire.

The winners must win two out of three games. Next games will be staged Thursday and onday evenings.

O'NEILL COMES RIGHT BACK AT J. C. REED

Empire State Agrees to Take to Water If Pennsylvania Will

The following communication from W. D. O'Neill is self-explanatory: Having noticed by Sunday's Republican the vehement challenge of my compatriot, J. C. Reed, I am compelled to get into the papers immediately to defend my title as the champion swimmer of the All States society for 55 yards. I know this will go hard on my friend Reed, who had previously "toughed" himself the champion swimmer of this society, but if he has become peeved over the recent race having ended as it did in his catching up by the heels and pulling me under water, why, I feel sorry for him. He also told several people before the race that he was a regular water cut-up, and gave out the impression that in addition to his speed he was a swell "Hula Hula" diver. Imagine Reed doing the "Hula Hula!"

It is now necessary for me to become peeved, as the said article went away back to the war between the United States and Honduras (?) and finally wound up with a suggestion that a modern German "steal-torpedo" net be used in the pool so as to make me safe from Reed's wild method of swimming, which makes a "steal" torpedo net necessary in the pool to protect Reed from the rest of the swimmers when he takes a bath. Further, the statement made by Reed that he could swim "steal" rings around me, and that he would bet a million dollars to a doughnut that he could beat me to the end of the pool, and calling me a would-be swimmer sounds like belligerent talk, but I hope we don't find it necessary to recall our diplomats.

I am sorry to call the attention of The Republican readers to the fact that what was really peeving Reed was not the loss of the swimming race so much as was the fact that the Pennsylvania society (of which he is president) had lost a tug of war for a banquet.

Now, I have this proposition to make. If the Pennsylvania society invite the Empire State society to a fried chicken dinner at Riverside Park in the near future, I will agree to swim a 55-yard race with their worthy president and respectfully request that he get his million dollars together to put up against my doughnuts one hour before the race or I will become the permanent champion by default. I will be there with plenty of doughnuts, so Reed might just as well consider his request for another chance to defend his lost title accepted, providing, of course, that he raises the necessary million dollars in time for the race. This is a regular "put-up or shut-up" proposition, and I will waive the "steal" net part of the agreement, as I expect to swim so fast Reed won't be able to locate me in the pool to again catch me by the heels as he did before. As for the "steal" rings, why anyone can see at a glance that he can't do it. I'll bet all my doughnuts right now that the chicken part of this proposition and the million dollar part of it will prove embarrassing to my friend Reed. See!

Even on the sea of matrimony there are a lot of fool boat rorkers.

POST SUPERB IN EXOTIC ROMANCE OMAR'S RUBIYAT

Noted Actor Charms Large Audience in Notable Performance of Richard Walton Tully's Famous Play — Wonderful Production.

There is a story to the effect that when Guy Bates Post was starring in "The Nigger" quite a number of years ago, Richard Walton Tully told him he was working on a play which would have Omar Khayyam for its central figure. Mr. Post asked for an opportunity to play it, declaring that in such a role he could do the best work of his life. Mr. Tully said that he wanted him to play the beach-comber in "The Bird of Paradise," first, but Post objects because the star part was a woman's. "I know," said Tully, "but if you will play this part I will take you into New York playing Omar Khayyam." So it happened that Guy Bates Post played in support of Laurette Taylor in the play which made her a star. He waited three years to play Omar but it was worth the waiting. Never has a finer role fallen to his lot and never has he done anything that so surely has stamped him as a splendid actor.

Analyzed as a play, disregarding the exquisite stage pictures with which the producers have surrounded it, "Omar the Tentmaker" is a series of long speeches, interspersed with poetry, and to hold an audience as Mr. Post surely does hold them, through all that talk is a feat few of our modern stage stars could accomplish. His love for all his frailties, is a most lovable old soul. A roysterer and a drunkard, but withal a man. It is a splendid creation a masterpiece of stage technique, and human. "Omar" is unquestionably the finest of a long line of his achievements.

As a production, it is lavish and beautiful in the extreme. The stage lighting in particular was superb, exquisitely lovely and pervading the whole play with the poetic charm of a lovely Persian garden. Not the least remarkable thing about it was the manner in which the huge settings were handled on the small stage at the Elks theater.

The support, as a whole, was good and the two Shireen, Louise Grassler and Mabel Emerson, were excellent. The performance was a particularly trying one for Miss Emerson, as her husband, who had been Mr. Post's manager for years, died yesterday morning in Los Angeles and was buried just before the company left for Phoenix.

It was good to see the Elks open again, and better to know that "Omar the Tentmaker" was truly indicative of the quality of the attractions booked by Mr. Redmond for the coming season. The others are of quite a different type, but of equally high calibre. There has been nothing here since the engagement of Sobern and Marlowe that could in any way compare with it. It was magnificent.

MAITLAND DAVIES.

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN FIFTEEN YEARS

"Deacon" Devine an Old Time Newspaper Man Revisits Phoenix

"Deacon" Devine an old time printer and newspaper man of Phoenix was in the city yesterday for the first time in fifteen years. He was not lost on his arrival in town, but found a strange transformation. Mr. Devine was formerly connected with the Democrat and Gazette. "Eighteen years ago he went to Yuma to take charge of the Sentinel which he conducted successfully for several years. About eight years ago he left Yuma and engaged in mining in Mexico and different parts of this country. He is now interested in properties in the northern part of the Harqua Valles and on the other side of the Colorado.

He is now a resident of Yuma again, for he thinks that that is a pretty good country. He is led to think so by the progressive spirit of that county in the matter of good road building. The county is now engaged in spending the proceeds of a $500,000 bond issue where it will do the most good.

He thinks that it would be a good thing for Maricopa county to acquire something of that spirit. He agrees with other visitors that one way to tell when one strikes the Maricopa county line is by the character of the roads. When they become impassable, the traveler may begin to suspect that he had reached Maricopa.

Mr. Devine who came in from the west yesterday morning left last night for Yuma.

COLONEL HARRIS

town a proprietor of a hotel put us up and gave us our meals, and would take nothing more than a concert from the boys in payment. Such treatment made us feel a little better and less inclined to look at the world in such a blue way. The fair authorities treated us very nicely, but it was from the owners of the concessions at the fair that we got our finest treatment.

"In regard to the condition of the local militia companies, I am here to state that unless the citizens hereabouts take more interest in them and fix up some way to relieve the financial difficulties they are immersed in, it is only a question of time until we are forced to disband them. We can't run the organization on talk. All the other companies in the state have been well taken care of by well wishers of the guard. Either bankers or individuals have taken up the auditors' certificates and cashed them, holding them until such a time as the auditor sees fit to honor them. We have simply got to have money, and I wish the people would begin to realize that.

"Some day in the future Phoenix is going to need these companies, and if by that time they have passed out of existence, there are liable to be many vain regrets that some way was not found to take care of them when they were thriving and ready to do their duty."

Yet blockheads are not the kind that produce the burning thoughts.
